Looking at the torriental rains, watershouts and floods reported on the fifteenth and sixteeenth from Pueblo, Hugo and other points along the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains-the flood in the mountain west of Pueblo reported as worse than any since 1863-we may expect a more decided and widespread reduction of temper-ature in the West than usually follows the dissolution of the mountsin snows. The high pressure and low temperature (forty five degrees) of Friday with the prevailing of north west winds over the extreme Northwest, indicate a marked moderation the heat, extended not only to the Missississippi and the lakes, but untimately to the Atlantic seaboard. But it will be well not to count on any cool spell lasting more than a very few days, as the maximum heat wave of the season is probably yet to come within the next ten days.
